

Indigenous Women in the Huasteca

FHP

The Feminist Humanities Project Digital Teaching Unit Collection

Title: Indigenous Women in the Huasteca

URL: <http://server.fhp.uoregon.edu/dtu/sites/huasteca/>

Author: Kristina Tiedje, Doctoral Candidate in Anthropology

Description: This site attempts to contribute to a larger discussion about the anthropological categories of ethnic identity, culture, and cultural difference in Latin America. As we understand them, the concepts of ethnic identity and culture are dynamic, fluid, and heteroglossic concepts that change through time and differ depending on local contexts, the political economy, and cultural histories of a people. The Huasteca region is a pluri-cultural region characterized by a dynamic flow on a continuum between diversity and cultural hegemony. Common Mesoamerican origins and ongoing regional cultural flows, métissage, patchwork and/or new creations lead to similarities as well as differences among contemporary Huastecan cultures.

FHP Project Director: Judith Musick, Ph.D.

Director:

Site Graphic and Technical Design: The Wired Humanities Project staff, with special thanks to our designer, Ryan Clark, our technician, Nathan Greenhaw, our Graduate Teaching Fellow, Kevin Van Driesche, our Coordinator, Stephanie Wood, and our Director, Judith Musick. Ryan Clark, a former student, is now available at ryan@ryanclarkdesign.com.

Funding Sources: Center for the Study of Women in Society

Sources:

Copyright Statement: ©2003, Feminist Humanities Project, Center for the Study of Women in Society, University of Oregon. All rights reserved.

Documents and materials located on the Feminist Humanities Project, University of Oregon WWW and FTP servers are copyrighted by the Feminist Humanities Project, University of Oregon, or by the authors of the individual documents, and are provided for the convenience of university faculty, students, and staff, with no warranty of accuracy or usability. Where material mirrors corresponding hardcopy documents, and/or where material makes explicit statements of university policy, the hardcopy version should be considered authoritative.

The University of Oregon is an equal opportunity, affirmative action institution committed to cultural diversity and compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Viewing software capable of displaying these materials in large print are available for a variety of computing systems. In addition, all publications on this server will be made available in alternative accessible formats on request; telephone (541) 346-5775 for assistance.

Username & Due to the many factors involved with copyright and the electronic Password medium, each of the web sites in our Digital Teaching Unit collection is Access: password-protected. If you would like to utilize or view any of the sites for educational use, please contact Stephanie Wood and please include in your e-mail the name of the site you would like to access, your school affiliation, and the subject area you teach. Thank you for your interest.